EDITORIAL

In this number of the Newsletter IFLA/LAC we share with our readers the academic and professional information that the members of the IFLA/LAC Standing Committee consider to be the most relevant issuing from our member countries in the second half of 2013.

Many professional challenges have been met and surpassed. Several international acknowledgments have been garnered, thereby enhancing the image of our region at world forums. It is my privilege to congratulate all those whose personal and professional achievements contribute to our professional guild.

Number 63 of the Newsletter IFLA/LAC features international events and the experiences of participants in the 79th General Assembly and World Library and Information Congress held in Singapore; while also looking at regional events and other local IFLA activities.

I am pleased to announce the release of the IFLA Trends Report in Spanish and, more recently, in Norwegian. I am sure it is everyone's hope that translation of this report to other languages will help bring about an open, frank discussion of ideas in accord with our socio-cultural context.

I would like to take this opportunity to express our thanks to all of the members for their efforts and especially to special our Central America responsible Karla Rodríguez Salas. This number also includes reports from IFLA/BSLA coordinator Fiona Bradley and Loida García-Febo, who serves on the IFLA Governing Board.

The enthusiasm we show will strengthen us as a region.

2014 World Library and Information Congress in Lyon

In her closing remarks at WLIC in Helsinki, Finland, IFLA President Ingrid Parent officially announced that Lyon, France, would host the 2014 World Library and Information Congress.

The City of Lyon was chosen because it is one of the most dynamic, culturally rich cities of Europe. Please do not miss out on the opportunity to attend this important IFLA event to be held August 16-22, 2014. For more information, visit: <http://conference.ifla.org/ifla80>

IFLA signed on to a key international document on human rights and electronic surveillance

IFLA was present at the signing of the International Principles on The Application of Human Rights to Communications Surveillance. These principles are the result of a long process of negotiations involving Privacy International, Electronic Frontier Foundation, Access, Human Right Watch, Reporters without Borders and the Association for Progressive Communication.

There are thirteen principles focused on the regulation of government surveillance of telecommunications: These are: Legality, Legitimacy of Objective, Need, Appropriateness, Proportion, Jurisdiction, Due Process, Notification of Users, Transparency, Public Oversight, Integrity of Telecommunications and Sub-Systems, Guarantees for International Cooperation and Safeguards against Improper Access.

Launch of IFLA Trends Report in Spanish

IFLA Initiative No. 5 on Multilingualism provides the authorization for the Spanish- Language Translation Program, which was entrusted to the IFLA/LAC Regional Office.

Among the results of this program is the release of the Spanish-language version of the IFLA Trends Report (<http://trends.ifla.org>), whose aim is to motivate the Spanish-speaking librarian community to participate in the discussion of five trends.

IFLA Contributions at the Internet Governance Forum in Bali, Indonesia

IFLA contributed actively in this year's Internet Governance Forum (IGF) held in Bali, Indonesia October 22-25, 2013.

IFLA participated with the conferences: "Internet copyright policy: Multiple stakeholders or multiple sides?" presented by Stuart Hamilton. Other IFLA presentations included: "Creation of internet content and information access"; Network neutrality: from architecture to standards"; "Legal matter and rights of disabled and indigenous persons"; Network neutrality: from architecture to standards"; and "IGF results: recommendations for a global strategy to enhance inclusion of vulnerable groups in the Information Society." The second session of the meeting enjoyed the presentation titled: "Dynamic union for public access to libraries," led by Stuart Hamilton.

IFLA welcomes US Court decision on legality of Google Books digitization

As an organization committed to the principle of freedom of access to information, and the belief that equitable access to information is vital to the educational and cultural well-being of communities, the International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions (IFLA) welcomes the decision of the US District Court with regards to the legality of the Google Books project. Last week, Judge Chin ruled that the digitisation of university library collections by Google was a fair use under US copyright law. In his ruling, Judge Chin observed:

"It advances the progress of the arts and sciences, while maintaining respectful consideration for the rights of authors and other creative individuals, and without adversely impacting the rights of copyright holders."

It is this balance between the rights of users and owners that IFLA is seeking to achieve for libraries internationally. IFLA is concerned that the US District Court's decision reflects a widening digital divide between what libraries are able to accomplish in the United States, as compared with the rest of the world. IFLA represents more than 1500 library associations and institutions in over 150 countries, many of whom are operating under a patchwork of restrictive copyright provisions ill-suited for the digital environment. IFLA maintains that access to digital library collections of the scale and nature of the Google Books project can be an unprecedented source for the advancement of learning and human development, and that this access should be universal.

IFLA provides new avenues for its members to participate in Webinars

The IFLA Standing Committees for Professional Development and On-the-Job Education, and the Special Interest Group for Entry-Level Professionals, in conjunction with the American Library Association, are offering new avenues for IFLA members to participate in online webinars. Over the last two years, quarterly webinars have been a big success, with online seminars led by IFLA President Sinikka Sipilä, Singapore National Library Head Librarian Gene Tan, ALA Head of the Office of Intellectual Freedom Barbara Jones, and IFLA/CLM President Victoria Owen. These webinars were attended by entry-level librarians, representatives of library associations, teachers of library science, politicians and practicing librarians, who discussed such topics as videogames in libraries, international librarianship, ongoing education for librarians, academic exchanges and libraries as cultural entities.

The collaborative effort behind these webinars was coordinated by CPDWL member Loida García-Febo, co-founder of NPSIG, who also sits on the IFLA Board of Governors. Her team in this project included: Ulrike Lang and Sylvia Piggott of CPDWL, Sebastian Wilke of NPSIG and the ALA Office of International relations. ALP News 2013

IFLA's Action for Development through Libraries programme (ALP) aims to strengthen the ability of the library and information sector to advocate for equitable access to information and resilient, sustainable library communities. ALP works in the following areas: Building the capacity of national and regional library associations (Building Strong Library Associations Programme) Developing leaders who can effectively represent the wider library sector in the international arena, and within IFLA (IFLA International Leaders Programme) Advocating for access to information and libraries in the post-2015 development agenda

Building Strong Library Associations Programme to be expanded: regional convenings in 2014

IFLA's successful Building Strong Library Associations (BSLA) programme will be expanded through a series of convenings and projects at the regional level in Africa, Asia and Oceania, and Latin America and the Caribbean from 2014. The BSLA programme consists of a training package and case studies on library association development; mentoring and advice on forming partnerships; an online platform for interactive learning and materials; and impact assessment. Between 2010 and 2012 IFLA delivered the BSLA programme in 6 countries (Botswana, Cameroon, Lebanon, Lithuania, Peru, Ukraine) and BSLA-related activities that reached a further 30 countries across the world.

A report on the impact of the programme was published in 2012 and can be downloaded from: <http://www.ifla.org/BSLA/impact>

Over the next three years until 2016, IFLA will build on the success of the programme and deliver convenings at the regional level where participants will be encouraged to think strategically about needs across the region, and in their own countries.

Africa Convening: Kumasi, Ghana, February 2014

The Africa Library and Information Association, Ghana Library Association and KNUST will host the Africa convening from 11-14 February 2014 in Kumasi, Ghana. The convening follows the IFLA Africa Section standing committee's midterm meeting.

Latin America and Caribbean Convening: São Paulo, Brazil, March 2014
Brazilian Federation of Associations of Librarians, Scientists of the Information and Institutions (FEBAB) and Universidade de São Paulo will host the LAC convening in March 2014, in São Paulo, Brazil. The convening will take place before a celebration of the LAC section's 40th anniversary, and the LAC section standing committee's midterm meeting.

Asia and Oceania Convening: Jakarta, Indonesia, March 2014. The National Library of Indonesia will host the Asia and Oceania convening in Jakarta, Indonesia in March 2014.

Each convening will include workshops, practical activities and project planning. Materials will be delivered from the BSLA programme, as well as IFLA's advocacy initiatives. The convening will be a very interactive meeting involving presentations, group work, discussions, and practical activities to take back to national associations to implement at the national or regional level.

During the convening, associations will identify their own needs for further activities and development, identify needs in the region, and form action plans for implementation. Participants will assess their association's and the region's priorities and understand opportunities for follow-up activities and project funding.

Participating associations will play different roles during the convening - sharing experiences and strategies with others, and benefiting from an opportunity to learn from other associations in their region. Up to 10 associations will be selected to participate in the convening. At least two people will be selected from each association.

Follow-up activities and project funding

After the convenings, participating associations will be invited to apply for project funding. These projects could include support to:

Implement BSLA workshops and activities at existing events eg national and regional library association conferences;

Deliver projects in-country, such as a series of BSLA workshops and activities;

Implement IFLA advocacy projects or policies;

Undertake projects bringing together a smaller number of associations in the region to form alliances or partnerships in pursuit of advocacy goals.

Associations will have several opportunities to apply for project funds between 2014-2016, as needs and priorities evolve.

Expected outcomes

To build a strong library sector that benefits society, associations need a strong foundation in representation, governance, organisational development and strategy. The long-term goal of the programme is to build the foundation for library associations to assist their work in representing the interests of library users, telling the story of libraries and gaining policymaker support and partnership.

The convening and follow-up activities will:
Reinforce inter-country networks and expertise to support development in the regions;

Increase understanding and adoption of IFLA policies and manifestos to support high quality library and information services;

Promote strong, credible associations that effectively represent the sector through improved leadership, governance, partnerships and membership;

Provide a foundation for sustained development and advocacy.

More information about the Building Strong Library Associations programme, and activities from 2014-2015, is available on the IFLA website: <http://www.ifla.org/bsla>

Libraries and the post 2015 development agenda: Access to information is central to development

As the United Nations reflects on the future of global development and the post-2015 agenda, access to information must be recognised as critical to supporting governments to achieve development goals, and enabling citizens to make informed decisions to improve their own lives. IFLA believes that high-quality library and information services help guarantee that access.

Through UN agency sessions, the WSIS+10 review process, and Member State consultations, IFLA is engaged with its members, civil society and the development community to advocate for access to information to be included in the post-2015 development agenda. IFLA ALP is leading this work in consultation with other IFLA units and national representatives.

The post-2015 framework will succeed the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and set the agenda for development for at least the next decade. The responsibility to reduce poverty, exclusion and inequality, build accountable public institutions, and achieve sustainability will be shared by all countries.

As all libraries actively support development, all libraries have a stake in the agenda

Libraries and access to information:

Enable governments and civil society to achieve development goals: Libraries are transparent, accountable institutions that support government programmes and provide services that help government, civil society and business to better understand citizens' information needs;

Support citizens to make informed decisions: Libraries provide equitable access to information, and expert guidance to effectively use the world's knowledge. Librarians contribute to the reduction of poverty, exclusion and inequality by helping citizens develop skills to effectively seek, access, and use information in all forms.

Every library and librarian supports development

IFLA encourages all library associations, institutions and librarians to demonstrate the contribution that access to information and libraries make to achieving development as outlined in the IFLA Statement on Libraries and Development <http://www.ifla.org/publications/ifla-statement-on-libraries-and-development> by:

Advocating for, and delivering, library and information services relevant to a library's local environment that help citizens to be educated, informed and included;

Monitoring and contributing to the post-2015 agenda utilising briefings and support materials to be provided by IFLA, and;

Supporting national and local frameworks that achieve development goals and help governments to understand citizens' information needs.

Highlights of the of the 2013 Singapore WLIC

María Elena Dorta-Duque Ortíz, director of scientific information of the Raúl Roa García Institute of Higher Learning in International Relations participated in the 79th IFLA General Assembly and Conference, presenting the poster: “Modernization of the Cuban National Medical Library,” designed by Bárbara Lazo Rodríguez of the IFLA/LAC Standing Committee, Carlos Mario Concepción Báez and María Elena Dorta – Duque Ortíz.

The Cuban representative attended the meeting of the Standing Committee of the IFLA/LAC Section, who in conjunction with Lynne M. Rudasill collaborated in the publication on digital libraries containing papers from Argentina, Cuba, Spain and the United States, all of which were presented in the IFLA satellite meeting held in Cuba in 2011. This bi-lingual publication is an example of the contribution of IFLA/LAC and the application of its key initiatives regarding open access and multilingualism in the design of information sources.

The IFLA International Program of Associate Leaders and the Presidential Meeting in Singapore 2013

George Octavio Ruiz Vaca MS participated in the Presidential Meeting held on August 22 with colleagues from Asia, Africa and Europe, offering an overview of the IFLA Open Access and Leadership Programme and the challenges to be met in order to implement it in the region. His overview pointed out that Brazil, Colombia, Chile and Mexico have considerable open access resources, which support scientific communication in the region.

Regarding promotion, the presentation identified Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, Peru, Puerto Rico and El Salvador as countries that participated actively in the Open Access Week, organizing conferences, workshops, and round tables on Open Access.

Ruiz concluded that Open Access is gaining increasing relevance in the region, which is enhancing sharing and dissemination of information resources among the region's growing scientific community.

BSLA workshop in Brazil

The FEBAB organized a BSLA workshop and the Federal Librarianship Counsel (CFB) in the framework of the 25th Brazilian Librarianship, Documentation and Information Sciences Congress, imparted by Elizabet de Carvalho and Elisete Melo.

On this occasion, the workshop was delivered in an abridged version. The workshop is informed by a strategic, coordinated vision for sustainable development of library associations and boards. The module "Supporting your librarian association" was also imparted with an emphasis in the areas of communication, leadership and strategic relations.

The presence of IFLA President Ingrid Parent in the second part of the seminar was important and motivating for the participants, and it will contribute to strengthening library associations in Brazil. The seminar allowed Parent to meet informally with leaders of libraries in Brazil and get to know the professionalism of these institutions.

Costa Rica

2nd Congress of Librarians of Costa Rica: new technology serving Information Units

This event is targeted at the wide librarian community and undergraduate students. Presenters/expositors: Ana Coralia (Story teller), Edgardo Vargas, José Pérez Abellán (Academic Librarian, Murcia University, Spain), Federico Sancho (IICA), Hazel Hernández (Academic Librarian), Héctor Chinchilla (Motivator), Lidiette Quirós (Academic Librarian), Vanessa Cohen, Vinicio Piedra (National Digital Press).

The congress was held June 6-7 for the purpose of strengthening ITC and its use in information services by means of advisory sessions led by specialists and participants sharing experiences.

Karla Rodríguez Salas

E-book and e-readers in libraries

This event invited academic librarians from across the country on August 19 in the Mark Twain Library of the Costa Rican-North American Cultural Center. The activity was imparted by Holly Murtten as part of the outreach activities of the US Embassy Information Center. The activity was attended by members of the librarian community from the county’s central region, and through virtual links to allow participation of librarians in the provinces. The event allowed participants to reflect on and discuss diverse user-driven activities that can arise from this kind of service.

14th International Book Fair of Costa Rica

The Fourteen International Book Fair of Costa Rica was held August 23-September 23. The event was organized by the Costa Rican Chamber of Books and the Ministry of Culture and Youth. Admission was free of charge.

The book fair aims to promote the following ideals:

The value of reading

Promotion of expressions of identity and cultural diversity

Motivating people to read and purchase books

Strengthening the national book publishing and distribution network

The fair also enjoyed the participation of Mexico as a special guest. Attendees were able to choose from more than 200 activities held at four sites, which brought together 40 thousand books and 50 international guests.

“We thought about all age groups, all possible ways of approaching literature and all discourses to underpin visual, audiovisual and multimedia narratives.” (14th International Book Fair of 2013).

Community readers and narrators project

The objective of this project is to strengthen the abilities of librarians and elementary and secondary school teachers to create educational spaces to promote reading.

The project is slated to last 12 months, and will be held in the public libraries of Liberia, Nicoya, Guadalupe (San José) and Limón. The 42-hour course consists of four workshop modules focused on enlivening reading through oral narration. The project also includes 12 reading festivals in diverse public libraries of the National Library System (SINABI).

International Meeting for Exchanging Experiences and Reflecting on Library Science Education

Marking the 40th anniversary of the National University, the School of Library Science, Documentation and Information organized a meeting of librarians September 3-4, 2013, in the Clodomiro Picado Auditorium, Campus Omar Dengo. The purpose of the activity focused on the creating spaces for exchanging experiences in library science education and identifying best practices.

The event enjoyed the participation of the School of Library Science, Documentation and Information of the National University of Costa Rica, the Complutense University of Madrid (Spain), the University of Antioquia (Colombia), and University of Zulia (Venezuela) and the UNAM Institute of Library and Information Science and Research (IIBI).

The following thematic headings were discussed in the meeting:

- Epistemology of library science
- Professional profiles and competencies in library science
- Socio-cultural activation of library science
- The place of library science in society

Students, academics and researchers from private and public universities participated in the event, including graduates, professionals and representatives of library associations.

What is the National Medical Sciences Information Center (INFOMED)?

The National Medical Sciences Information Center (CNICM) was launched in Cuba in 1965 and is known internationally as INFOMED, the coordinating center in the country of the National Medical Science Information Center, consisting of 747 libraries and information centers of diverse levels, is located largely in hospitals and health clinics.

The structure of INFOMED - CNICM consists of sub-directorates, which includes the National Medical Library, Special Information Services, Medical Sciences Publishing, and Information Services for Technology, Teaching and Research. It also maintains a close working relationship with the Latin American and Caribbean Health Information System headquartered in Brazil (also known by its Portuguese-language acronym BIREME for Regional Medical Library), with which it collaborates in diverse regional projects aimed at developing a search engine of biographical data bases, such as LiLaCS and the collective catalogue of journal publications SeCS.

Subsequently, it joined in the project to build a Virtual Health Library, providing open access for users to the titles on health sciences in Cuba by means of the CUMED online access data base and other plans.

Eight years as institutional member of IFLA

During the proceedings of 2006 IFLA WLIC, we took on the responsibility of coordinating the activities associated with enrolling the National Medical Sciences Information Center as an institutional member of IFLA. This duty has been met for the last eight years and has brought many advantages to the Center.

From that time forward, the Center has enjoyed the right to participate on the technical committees for Library of Health and Biosciences and Information Technologies.

Additionally as member of the Latin America and Caribbean Section, our institution has over the last ten years attended congresses and participated in elections of IFLA executive officers. The Center has also contributed to the IFLA agenda and enjoys enrollment discounts for annual congresses.

Currently, two members of the Center, Bárbara Caridad Lazo Rodríguez and Ileana Regla Alfonso Sánchez, serve respectively on the IFLA/LAC Standing Committee and the Library of Health and Biosciences Committee for 2011-2015.

A library in its 140th year

The Second Ordinary Session of the Mexican Librarians Association (AMBAC), headquartered in the National Polytechnic Institute School of Commerce and Business Administration (ESCA-IPN), celebrated the 140th anniversary of its library on September 11.

The meeting opened with the introduction of the members of the AMBAC Board of Directors and authorities of the host institution.

Thereafter, guests listened to remarks offered by the AMBAC president and words from three special guest speakers: Benito Taibo, Cristina Pacheco and Fernanda Tapia, from Channel 11's cultural programming, who offered reflections on the topic: "Libraries, librarians and something more." The event was moderated by Miguel de la Cruz.

The event unfolded in a relaxed atmosphere. Those in attendance listened attentively to the many amusing anecdotes offered by the guest speakers about their memory of experiences with books, libraries and the important work of librarians.

The event concluded with the unveiling of a commemorative plaque by ESCA Director Norma Cano Olea and AMBAC President Maria Asunción Mendoza Becerra.

With the presence of AMBAC, an institutional member of IFLA, the National Polytechnic Institute celebrated the 140th anniversary of the Library of the School of Commerce and Business Administration.

International Internet Governance Forum (IGF)

International Internet Governance Forum launched discussions in Latin America with the inaugural event: "Dialogues on Internet Governance."

The objective of this local effort is to promote informed participation of Mexican agencies in both regional and international internet governance forums. In addition to strengthening the impact of diverse Mexican stakeholders in local, regional and international internet governance events, this Forum hopes to spark dialogue in Mexico with regard to these matters.

The principles guiding the "Dialogues on Internet Governance" are as follows:

Under parity of condition, equal participation of all stakeholders in the Mexican internet ecosystem.

Generation of balanced information for the audience, as a function of the respective roles of the interested parties and in accord with the principles of the Internet Governance Forum.

Inclusion of diverse positions in order to prevent hearing only one point of view.

Development of dialogue that recognizes the richness of ideas, which are not necessarily in agreement, and without pretending to reach final conclusions, consensus or make decisions.

Establishment of a neutral space, which invites participants to express views freely.

Diversity of funding mechanisms; prevent preponderance of any given sector that might cause collective apprehension with regard to the event; which is to say: an event of everyone and for everyone.

The first meeting to promote dialogue on internet governance was held in Mexico City November 4 and 5, 2013. The following persons participated in the event: Silvia Alanis and Víctor Martínez, officials of the Mexican government; María Cristina Capelo and Lina Ornelas of Google; Rodrigo de la Parra of ICANN Latin America; Manuel Haces and Oscar Robles of NIC México; Octavio Islas, independent consultant; Alejandro Pisanty and León Felipe Sánchez of ISOC México; Julio Téllez, of INFOTEC; and Jorge Vega of Microsoft.

The thematic thrusts of discussions were: network security; cyber-crime, user privacy and confidence; neutrality, freedom of expression and information, interoperability and coexistence of technological alternative; access, digital inclusion, cultural diversity and competition; and intellectual property rights in the digital context.

General Ordinary Session of the Library Association of Trinidad and Tobago

The Library Association of Trinidad and Tobago (LATT) held its Ordinary General Meeting and Conference Reporting Session on Friday, October 11, 2013. The Conference Reporting session is normally held at the end of LATT's official business.

Devika Ramsingh delivered the first presentation which focused on “The role of libraries in the accreditation process.” Ms. Lorraine Nero spoke about her experience while receiving training in the following areas: Records Management; Appraisal and Acquisition of Collections and Arrangement, Description and Exhibits. Lorraine Nero ended by stressing that information professionals need to be aware of the country's laws as they pertain to management of archives, especially Freedom of Information laws designed to ensure ethical practices are followed while carrying out job duties.

Niala Dwarika-Bhagat, who was a first time attendee at the IFLA conference in Singapore, provided LATT members' a taste of Singapore in a clip of the opening ceremony. Her presentation: “Conferencing in the Lion City: IFLA WLIC 2013 through the eyes of a first timer,” highlighted some of the sessions she attended. She commended the IFLA presenters and was impressed with the wealth of knowledge she garnered while networking. She also noted the numerous vendor booths, the many prizes and gifts which were available and emphasized the advantages of attending conferences to visit other libraries, network and share ideas with other librarians. Interestingly, she spoke about a library run only by volunteers; this left some of us thinking of the future.

Jiselle Alleyne, delivered a paper titled: “Re-positioning the Academic Library: Meeting the needs of adult learners through Educational Technologies and Transformative Learning development.” The paper focused on the role of academic libraries in meeting the needs of adult learners.

“Librarianship at CARIFESTA” was the title of the presentation delivered by Gerda Holder, who attended CARIFESTA XI 2013 Culture for Development as the coordinator of Trinidad and Tobago's Literary Arts Component Contingent. Some felt that it was an unusual job for a librarian, but when Gerada elaborated on her responsibilities it was immediately clear why her role was so important.

The final presentation was delivered by Danielle Fraser, the country's sole conservator, who manages the Conservation Laboratory at the National Library Building in the city's capital. She discussed the main issues addressed at the meeting, which had focused on contemporary conservation. Fraser spoke about learning to manage projects, which she believes is an important but undervalued skill. Having attended several sessions, she highlighted an interesting presentation titled Flip, flap, and crack: the conservation of 400 Years of anatomical flap books, which provided guidance on how to handle delicate, old materials. The meeting, much like a conference, also included panel discussions and exhibits.

To end the day, the members were treated to a demonstration by Sasha Cosmetics on the professional application of makeup. This activity was enthusiastically received, with members sharing their ideas and getting tips and guidelines for creating a professional look.
