Auditorium Hall (SI)

Out of the Stacks: Special Collections in Society - Rare Books and Special Collections (SI)

Chair: Beth Kilmarx, Binghamton University Libraries, United States

Chair: Krister Östlund, Uppsala University Library, Sweden

What happens when special collections are taken out of their library home, either virtually or physically, and used by the library or by others beyond the traditional ways in which libraries have interpreted these collections for audiences who come into their buildings? Today's exhibitions may be accompanied by a programme of marketing and promotion. Some people's encounters with books and manuscripts may be entirely through seeing their images used in a tourism campaign and buying related merchandise. Libraries also enter into a wide range of partnerships with commercial companies who digitise their materials. This session will present papers that move beyond case studies into an examination of the issues raised by the use of collections in non-traditional ways.
