Why are the libraries publishing?

Publishing by academic libraries is emerging as a viable means to create open access to scholarly research.

Library publishing supports development of a “New Fair Deal” where academic libraries creatively decommmodify knowledge by directly subsidizing library publishing cooperatives.” (Ghamandi, 2018)

Publishing aligns with the library mission

The Libraries ignite curiosity, serve as the locus of knowledge management, and promote intellectual exchange within our diverse global learning community.

The Smathers Libraries collaborate with UF faculty, students and staff, as well as the University's collaborators and constituents, to facilitate knowledge creation that contributes to UF's standing as a preeminent public research university.

Testimony of success

“I am writing this e-mail to, first, express my gratitude to the staff of the library. The circulation of the journals and visibility through Google Scholar has already greatly improved.

I think that all journal editors at the [campus unit] should take note of this opportunity, which is incredible, considering the cost or/and strings attached if one were to engage in similar cooperative agreement with a commercial publisher.”
